Washington Grove Joins Over One Thousand Leaders Across the United States
Affirming Commitment to Global Climate Action on the Fifth Anniversary of the Paris
Agreement

December 12th marked the five-year anniversary of the world coming together to sign on to the Paris Climate Agreement. Counties and cities across Maryland are marking the moment by committing to a national mobilization for a clean energy economy and centering their own operations in pursuit of climate action. The Town of Washington Grove joins a number of Maryland jurisdictions that have signed the “America Is All In” declaration, including Anne Arundel, Montgomery, and Prince George’s, as well as Annapolis, Baltimore City, College Park, Rockville, Salisbury, and Takoma Park. These Maryland jurisdictions joined over a thousand leaders from local governments, businesses, universities, and other institutions across the country as part of the “America Is All In” declaration.

“When the eyes of our children, and their children, look straight into ours, and they ask us
“What did you do?” our answer cannot just be we did everything we could.
It has to be more than that.
There is really only one answer.
We did everything that was necessary.”

These are the stirring words of Christiana Figueres in her book The Future We Choose. Christiana was chosen by the United Nations to leave her long-time home across from McCathran Hall and lead the world to the historic global coming together of nations known as the Paris Accords. Washington Grove authorized Mayor Joli McCathran to join “We Are Still In” in 2017 and are now hereby reaffirming our commitment to meeting the necessary goals of those Paris Accords.

The “America Is All In” declaration is organized by We Are Still In, a coalition in support for climate action and a pledge to uphold the United States commitments to reduce emissions under the Paris Agreement. With more than 3,900 organizations and institutions across all sectors of the United States, these leaders represent over half of the national population, nearly two-thirds of the economy, and more than half of the country’s emissions. While the United States officially exited the Paris Agreement on November 4th, the incoming Biden-Harris administration has committed to reentering the unprecedented global agreement.

“December 12th is more than an anniversary of an agreement, it represents a critical turning point for the future of U.S. and global climate action,” said Elan Strait, Director of US Climate Campaigns at World Wildlife Fund (WWF). “Nationally, we have stumbled in our leadership on climate action. But We Are Still In shows that there was a commitment to change in the United States that never faltered. Today’s statement from the Maryland jurisdictions and hundreds like them across the country sends a clear message that, moving forward, we need a unified national response to the climate crisis.”

The Town hereby adopts the attached “America is All In” Declaration.

WE ARE STILL IN

AMERICA IS ALL IN

U.S. COMMUNITIES, BUSINESSES, AND INSTITUTIONS ARE READY FOR A NATIONAL MOBILIZATION ON CLIMATE AND RECOVERY

In 2017, we launched We Are Still In to maintain America's promise to tackle climate change. In the time since, wildfires and other climate-fueled disasters have impacted the lives and well-being of millions of Americans, threatened our nation's supply chains, and put countless communities at risk. COVID-19 has concurrently created a national health and economic crisis.

Tackling the climate crisis is essential to help our nation recover from these crises by creating good paying jobs for millions of Americans, fostering U.S. energy innovation, increasing our national security, and protecting the health and well-being of present and future generations. It will also provide us with our best opportunity to address systemic inequalities that have forced vulnerable communities, especially communities of color, to bear the brunt of climate impacts and environmental and economic injustice.

Over the last four years, thousands of government, civic, religious, and business leaders in the U.S. have doubled down on reducing dangerous carbon pollution, and have done so in the face of federal inaction and an increasingly dire scientific outlook. Today, one in three Americans live in a jurisdiction committed to 100% clean electricity. 16 states have passed or committed to pass regulations and legislation that would phase down the use of hydrofluorocarbons, a potent greenhouse gas. And in three years, the U.S. electric vehicle market has doubled. Despite these advances, more action is needed to protect vulnerable populations and rebuild the U.S. economy.

Now we, the undersigned governors, tribal leaders, mayors, state legislators, and local officials, and colleges and universities, businesses, investors, faith groups, cultural institutions, and health care organizations, are joining together once again to reaffirm our commitment to the Paris Agreement on climate change and pledge to partner with the Biden-Harris Administration, which has made ambitious commitments to tackle the climate crisis.

We call on the incoming administration and other federal policymakers to join us in a national response to ensure our safety and prosperity by taking immediate action to:

Drive economic growth across every sector of the economy through job-creating sustainable investments:

- Unleash innovation through extraordinary investments in clean buildings, low-carbon transportation, grid and infrastructure modernization, natural climate solutions, climate smart-agriculture, and community resilience, all of which will create millions of good-paying jobs and support a clean and just future for all Americans;
- Undertake the necessary actions to achieve a 100% clean energy power sector as soon as feasible;

Expand U.S. leadership at home and abroad:

- Rejoin the Paris Agreement on day one, leverage diplomatic partnerships to finance and encourage ambition, and re-engage with the rest of the world on a global solution to the climate crisis;
- Put forward an ambitious and equitable nationally determined contribution to the Paris Agreement, with a science-based target for 2030 that takes community and institutional efforts and perspectives into consideration;
- Commit the United States to a trajectory of net zero emissions by 2050 or sooner, and implement policies that put us on a path to achieving that goal;

Reimagine community partnership to advance just and equitable climate solutions and build resilience to climate change:

- Support states, tribal nations, cities and counties, businesses, universities, health care organizations, cultural institutions, and all other coalition actors in going above and beyond these policies to drive greater national ambition to tackle the climate crisis, while ensuring that the nation is prepared to adapt to the realities of climate change and strengthen its resilience to climate impacts; and
- Consult these leaders and impacted communities, recognizing their unique expertise and potential, and develop unprecedentedly inclusive processes in the formation and implementation of new targets, policies, and programs to tackle the climate crisis

In addressing the climate crisis, and undertaking these efforts, the United States should endeavor to do so in a manner that does not exacerbate local environmental justice conflicts nor ecological loss or damage, and proactively seeks to resolve injustice and restore ecosystems.

We pledge to support these policies at the national and local level, and place climate considerations at the core of our own institutions: how we do business, how we invest, how we govern, how we educate, how we serve. We urge the Biden-Harris Administration and Congress alike to adopt a similar whole-of-government approach to tackling this crisis, and look forward to working in close partnership and dialogue – public and private collaboration across all levers of power – to achieve our shared vision.

Signed,
